Finding Earth, Finding Soul
- The invisible path to authentic leadership
Tim Macartney
Green Books 2007

For them to hear this story might hopefully be influential in awakening the reader, the world of management learning and society in general to the challenge of our age. He describes his happenstance beginning, his early work with managers, his establishment of Embercombe as a powerful centre for such work, the story of Pathways as a learning enterprise and his own quest for self-awakening. In so doing he transmits a message regarding western civilisations’ abuse of the earth and the need and hope for an alternative way of being.

Through the unique features of his own journey, Mac brings the reader into respectful relationship with the wisdom of old – what he refers to as the Invisible Path. He bears witness to its application to leadership through his own authentic voice. Is authenticity anything less than this link from earth to soul?

Macartney speaks direct to the reader from his own experience – the deep experience of a mature and perceptive individual. It is a call from his soul to yours. A call to awaken, to play your part, to live rightly and to touch the earth. Not only to touch the earth but to rejoice in being intimately connected to the living earth and all her gifts. To learn to love and be loved – to live fully and wholly. It is a lovely book, majestic in its reach. It is also an engaging read. I heartily commend it.

I have found an unexpected amount of fabulous insights in this book and I recommend it to anyone who's follow the journey of their invisible path. I met Tim Macartney (aka "Mac") I have to be honest: it wasn't an easy read for 2 reasons: 1. This book is written in a quite "old fashioned way", which means that some descriptions required more effort for me to read through. 2. This book is so full of amazing thoughts, ideas and stories that spark my imagination, that pushed my thinking to go deeper. I have found an unexpected amount of fabulous insights in this book Finding your Soul Team and your Earth Ancestry Group. As you enter into full consciousness of your connection to the Earth and your access to the Earth's Akashic records, you will begin to feel a magnetic "pull" or attraction that will bring your Earth Soul "Team" to you. You will also begin to feel the stirrings of your Earth "Ancestry" within your body and your multi-dimensional being. Your Earth Soul Team consists of those Ascended and Awakened beings with whom you will work to fulfil your Soull Mission and manifest the New Earth. These new Soul Teams will
